We toured up Lick Creek today. The temp in the parking lot was 17*f temperatures warmed as we climbed out of the valley. At the top of the ridge at 8450' it was 45* +/- a little on the little thermometer on my pack. The snow was wet and heavy, ski quality was mediocre to poor. Things were stable with nothing moving. Lots of glopping on the skins! The ski out was ok in the track but sticky elsewhere making things somewhat challenging. Back at the parking lot at 3 pm it was 15*f. The last 100' to the road was cold powder. I have never seen an inversion quite like that!
